

PARTICIPANT TELLS OF LAST RITES FOR POPE

Cardinal Aloysius Tripepi Describes Moving Scene at Bedside of Holy Father as Last Sacrament Is Administered and Leo Blesses His Cardinals and Attendants.

ROME, July 6.—Cardinal Aloysius Tripepi, the papal standard bearer, described to-day the affecting scene in the papal death chamber when the last sacrament was administered to the dying Pontiff.

"All the cardinals now in Rome—twenty-five in all—and the entire papal court participated in the solemn ceremony," he said. "It was the most moving scene I ever witnessed. Sixteen of us, each carrying a lighted taper, left the Sistine Chapel and walked processionally into the death chamber. His Holiness lay on the bed, his shoulders enveloped in a white silk shawl. He was slightly raised on a pillow.

"Leo's pale, emaciated face, almost as white as the pillow, showed little sign of life except in the keen eyes, which sparkled with intelligence and were an expression of the most wonderful serenity.

SCENE IS PICTURESQUE.

"Around the bed were grouped the Swiss Guards in their gorgeous uniforms, the Knights of the Cloak and Sword in picturesque mediaeval costumes of black with white ruffs and the twenty-five cardinals in their scarlet robes. The lofty chamber was dimly lighted by a lamp close to the Pontiff's head and the semicircle of flickering tapers held by the cardinals.

"Nearest the bed stood the imposing figure of the Grand Penitentiary Cardinal, Serafino Vanutelli, and Mgr. Pifferi, an Augustinian friar who is the Pope's confessor. The latter leaned across the bed and heard the whispered confession of the dying Pontiff.

"While all present knelt, the Priest Apostolic approached and gave the Pope the viaticum. Then, with the assistance of the Grand Penitentiary, extreme unction was administered. His Holiness feebly recited the Confiteor, and then the absolution and the formula of indulgence in articulo mortis was solemnly pronounced by Cardinal Vanutelli.

GIVEN SPECIAL INDULGENCE.

"The heads of the religious orders present granted the Pope the special indulgences they have the privilege of conferring. Mgr. Cagiano, the major domo, read in a broken voice the prayers for a passing soul and part of the Gospel of the Lord's passion.

"All present were in tears, many of the stately Cardinals sobbing aloud, as the Pontiff, raising his almost transparent fingers with a feeble effort, pronounced in scarcely audible words his benediction on the Sacred College and all present.

"After a brief pause each Cardinal, arising, passed on to the bedside and, kneeling, kissed the Pope's hand and begged his benediction. As each of us passed His Holiness called us by name. I was too overcome by emotion to ask the Holy Father's blessing. Leo said to me, 'Pray for me.'

"When my colleague Ferrata reached the Pope's side, Leo exclaimed in joyful tones, waving his hand, 'Good-by, Ferrata; we are leaving for eternity.'

SCENES DURING LEO'S LAST HOURS

He Sits Up in His Armchair, but This Effort Is Believed to Be the Final Flicker of the Vitality That Surprises His Attendants.

ROME, July 6.—Despite the favorable impression of the Pontiff's condition, given in Dr. Lapponi's latest bulletin, the august patient made no progress toward recovery during the night. He enjoyed only the artificial sleep produced by chloral, and when the effect of the drug wore off he would awake in excruciating pain.

Dr. Lapponi and the Pope's faithful valet, Pio Centra, were beside him all night. Several times the agony of the Pontiff seemed to portend his speedy dissolution.

SITS UP IN HIS CHAIR.

Those who know what is transpiring in the Pontiff's bedchamber know that the end is only a question of hours.

Baron Meyer, the commandant of the Swiss Guard, told The World correspondent that His Holiness had left his bed this morning and was seated in an armchair.

This apparent amelioration in the Pope's condition is so unnatural, considering the gravity of his illness, that it is feared that possibly it is only the last flickering of the vital flame.

That the physicians have abandoned all hope was evidenced when Cardinal Oreglia, the Papal Camerlengo or Chamberlain, moved into the Vatican to-day, occupying rooms on the third floor, just above the Pope's living apartments.

The duty of the Papal Chamberlain is to take official verification of the Pontiff's death and assume the Pontifical authority during the Papal interregnum.

OBJECTED TO OXYGEN.

As the Pope objected to having the oxygen inhaling apparatus continually under his nostrils, Dr. Lapponi arranged to impregnate the whole atmosphere of the room with oxygen.

"That is much better," said the Pontiff; "before I felt as though I had lost my liberty."

Although Dr. Lapponi continually recommends the patient not to speak and to pay no attention to what is passing outside, the Pope gently refuses to abandon participation in what is going on. He said, smiling, to Dr. Lapponi:

"I know you say this because of your affection for me; but either way the day is rapidly approaching, in which case I must employ all the time which is left to me so far as I can, or else I shall recover, again postponing the end. If this is the will of the Almighty nothing can change it."

The Pope wished his arm chair to be carried near his writing table and then to the window overlooking the piazza of St. Peter. Noticing many persons in carriages the Pope said:

"The piazza looks as it does when I am about to perform some public function."

He seemed somewhat prostrated after a rather exciting morning, and at 2.45 is enjoying much-needed sleep.

ITALIAN KING DREPLY CONCERNED.

King Victor Emmanuel is much concerned over the Pope's illness. He has abandoned his proposed trip to Paris and has had private messengers keeping him constantly informed of the Pontiff's condition.

The king's hold on life is remarkable. He has been dying since noon of the 5th, when the pneumonia in his right lung began to cause excruciating pain. Prof. Mazzoni, who had been called in consultation by Dr.

POPE LEO XIII. AND MEMBERS OF HIS FAMILY, PHOTOGRAPHED SHORTLY BEFORE HIS ELECTION TO THE PONTIFICAL CHAIR.

Lapponi, the Pope's favorite physician, made a diagnosis of hepatic (becoming liver like) degeneration in the lung. Finding the patient too aged and enfeebled to respond to the efforts made to restore his strength, Prof. Mazzoni said the end would come in forty-eight hours.

The Pope admitted during the consultation that he was very ill. His mind remained keen, and he discussed with the physicians their prescriptions. He felt at the time that the end was close at hand, for when the task of informing him of the gravity of his condition was imposed on his confessor, Mgr. Pifferi, an Augustinian friar, the Pope expressed his desire to receive extreme unction in the evening.

Mgr. Pifferi suggested that he wait until morning, but the Pope insisted, saying: "To-morrow I shall be no more."

LATEST OFFICIAL NEWS OF THE POPE.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The following cablegram was received to-day by the Apostolic Delegate from Cardinal Rampolla:

"The condition of the holy father is still grave, but no worse. Night calm. Takes food without reluctance. Mind perfectly clear."

LATEST BULLETIN, ROME, July 6.

"Although His Holiness passed the night almost without sleep, he is not so uneasy as he was yesterday. The Pope has been benefited by the injection of digitalis and camphor, and the condition of his chest is normal. There is a slight cough with some catarrhal emission. Sufficient nourishment has been taken. The pulse is still weak, but not intermittent, and the temperature is below normal. The condition of the august patient, therefore, cannot be described as better, but it certainly is no worse."

LAPPONI.

POPE'S SUCCESSOR AND HOW HE WILL BE CHOSEN.

There are many candidates for the papal crown. Who shall be chosen to succeed Leo XIII. has been these many years a matter of discussion not alone in the ante-chambers of cardinals and princes of the Church, but in the courts of all Catholic countries and the capitals of civilization. The question has been agitated time and again in the decade past with more or less heat, and it is not likely that this generation will ever know the inside history of the various movements that have been started in the interest of eligible clerics, nor what bearing they have had upon the fate of rulers and their ambitions.

Watchers of church politics thought some time ago that Cardinal Serafino Vanutelli, Bishop of the See of Frascati, would be the choice of the Conclave. He is the elder of two brothers in the Sacred College of Cardinals. He is an aristocrat of the first water, by birth and inclination, a diplomat of the greatest subtlety. He has acted as nuncio at several courts, more notably that of Austria, and it has been believed that that empire and Germany would wield their influence in his behalf whenever the time came. Of course, the espousal of his cause by Berlin and Vienna would mean the opposition of France and Russia.

He Has Wide Influence.

Serafino Vanutelli is a man of wide personal influence and often has shown slight deference to Leo, retaining all ways, however, an uneasy respect for the Pope. In earlier years the Cardinal leaned zealously to ultramontanism, but with the advancement of age he has become more moderate.

Cardinal Vincenzo Vanutelli is considered less than his brother as a papal possibility, but in the event of the latter's selection would have great power at the Vatican. He would become a factor to be counted with in ecclesiastical politics. He has had experience in the administration of church affairs as Under Secretary of State to Pius IX. He is a finished scholar and a diplomat of the highest order.

The Camerlengo, as the Cardinal is called, who acts as regent, so to speak, during the interregnum between the waiver in his all allegiance to Cardinal Serafino Vanutelli, then supposed to be his candidate.

Another candidate is Cardinal Svampa, a good priest and a man of parts, but he has neither the diplomatic qualities of the elder Cardinal Vanutelli, nor, so far as can be seen, the administrative skill and authority of Cardinal Farocchi.

The Learned Capocciato.

Mention must also be made of Cardinal Capocciato, the pious, learned and temperate Archbishop of Capua. Queen Margherita, in the lifetime of King Humbert, secretly advocated the claims of Cardinal Capocciato to the Pontificate. Were he chosen it is possible that something would be done, without the sacrifice of anything highly essential to the body of the Church, between the Vatican and the Quirinal.

Ceremony of Election.

Few elections, political or religious, have ever called into service so much subtlety and diplomacy as those which have made the Popes.

As, however, twenty-five years have now elapsed since the last election, it may reasonably be suspected that the members of the Sacred College are not so well practiced in the electioneering arts of the Conclave as those of past times, when two elections would take place in a year, and even four have been recorded as having taken place in eighteen months.

Originally the clergy and people united in the election of the Pope until Nicholas II. in 1057, restricted the quality of the elector to the body of Cardinals, and Alexander III. in 1179 declared that a majority of two-thirds of their number should be necessary for the election of a Pope.

The Cardinals are of three orders—bishops, priests and deacons—and there are, as a rule, six bishops, fifty priests and fourteen deacons.

The Customs of Looking Up.

The custom of looking up the Cardinals conclave, from which the Conclave gets its name, dates from the long-contested election of Gregory X., and became law by a Bull of that Pope after his election to the Papacy in 1270.

The Conclave of Gregory X. was one of the longest on record, lasting two years. Clement IV., the predecessor of Gregory, died at Viterbo, and the Cardinals, not being able to agree upon the choice of a successor, were preparing to leave the town when St. Bonaventura, the disciple of St. Francis of Assisi, persuaded the inhabitants to shut their gates and not to let the Cardinals go until the Pope was made.

Gregory X.'s election resulted. Shortly after his election, Gregory X. issued a Bull that all future Popes should be elected in Conclave—that is, by any body of Cardinals looked up by the people and subject to specified restrictions as to diet and attendance until the election was over.

Watched by Ambassadors.

At the gate of the conclave, however, there is a strict rule, and each Cardinal is fully watched by five Papal Masters of Ceremonies, by the foreign ambassadors and formerly by delegates of the city of Rome.

All the meals of the Cardinals are passed through this wicket.

For the first time in the history of the conclave, a Cardinal was elected to the papacy of Leo XIII., which was also conspicuous for a great disregard of numerous restrictions, and for considerable attention to the comfort of the Cardinals and their conclavists.

On the tenth day after the Pope's death the Cardinals held high mass at St. Peter's and then go in procession to enter into the conclave. The Pope's Creator Spiritus or hymn in honor of the Holy Ghost. On the first day they are at liberty to return home to dine if they choose, but at 1 o'clock the bell of the conclave is rung by the order of the dean for all visitors to depart. At 2 o'clock the second signal is given, and at 3 the great door is shut, not to be opened until the conclave is over except that a Cardinal who has not entered it may do so at any time.

There are three modes of election: Election by compromise, by acclamation and by ballot.

In the election by compromise the Cardinals, if unable to agree, nominate one or more members of their body to designate the new Pope.

Summer Rashes

Election by Acclamation.

Election by acclamation or acclamation takes place when a number of Cardinals, amounting to two-thirds at least, acclaim the Pope without preliminary ballot.

The ballot, however, is the method now regularly adopted. Two-thirds of the votes of the Cardinals present, as already mentioned, necessary for election, and the vote is secret.

The act of voting is performed in the Capella Paolina, and the votes are taken twice a day.

Each Cardinal writes on a little tablet in the corner of the tablet the name of the candidate he would elect, in a folded down and sealed in leaving only the centre inscription visible. In the morning the writer signs his name, and then seals down the tablet with a small seal which each voter has expressly made for this purpose and which he prevents others from seeing. Within the lower fold he writes a Latin motto from the Bible and a number, sealing it up likewise.

The Cardinal then folds the tablet in two without again sealing it and approaches the altar where is placed a chalice, covered with a paten.

At the foot of the altar the voter lifts up his hand and exhibits the tablet between his thumb and finger. He then kneels and prays for a moment, after which he takes each tablet and puts it to elect him whom, according to God, he thinks ought to be elected.

HOW DEATH OF LEO WILL BE GIVEN OUT

The Rev. Daniel J. McMacKin, who was lately appointed to St. Patrick's Cathedral, said to-day in the absence of Archbishop Farley that in the event of the death of the Pope the Papal Delegate at Washington would be at once notified. He in turn would send official notices to the pastors of the different churches throughout the country in the shape of pastoral letters.

Then the Archbishops would arrange elaborate mourning services for the Pope, to be performed in every cathedral in the country. The ceremonies would consist of masses in the cathedrals and in the churches. Then all of the churches would go into mourning for a period of from one to six months.

Father McMacKin said that it was so long since a sad occasion of the kind had occurred in the Church that he did not really know what detail of the ceremonies would be followed. Archbishop Farley will return to New York to-night.

When asked if the death of the Pope would alter the arrangements for the ceremony attending the conveying of the pallium on Archbishop Farley on July 22 Dr. McMacKin said: "No, it will go on just the same, but without the solemnity. Archbishop Farley after arriving in New York to-night will go in retreat at the Diocesan College at Fordham and remain there until next Saturday night."

At the conclusion of his retreat appointments to vacancies will be made."

CARDINAL GIBBONS TO GO TO ROME.

BALTIMORE, July 6.—Cardinal Gibbons has made all arrangements to leave without delay immediately on receiving notice of the Pope's death. A trunk has been packed and all business affairs have been so arranged that there will be nothing to hinder the Cardinal's taking the first train for Rome, which will sail upon receiving the notification.

Cardinal Gibbons is enjoying a few days' rest at the home of Dr. Herbert Shriver, seven miles from this city. When shown the bulletin telling of the Pope's condition he said:

"This news is a profound sorrow. You may say that in the event of the death of His Holiness I shall start immediately for Rome, because I honor him for his greatness, esteem him for his goodness, and love him for himself and for his great kindness to me."

Turning to those assembled he read the bulletins aloud and remarked:

"They are a most comforting report, and it gives me profound sorrow. I am sure that the Pope's illness, but my hope and prayer through the day has been that these might be as other rumors of the past. But these bulletins satisfy me that the sad news is true."

WOMAN HELD UP AND ROBBED IN CEMETERY

Italian Held as Assailant Who Took $545 from Mrs. Pavenda at Kensico.

Detective Sergeant Petrosino and Lang, of Inspector McCue's staff, arrested Achille Riccardio, of No. 72 Mulberry street, before Magistrate Green in the Tombs Court to-day on a charge of larceny and assault.

The case came from Valhalla, Westchester County, where in Kensico Cemetery on May 16 Sebastian Pavenda, a wealthy merchant of Valhalla, and his wife Mary were held up and assaulted by Riccardio. The husband alleges that the robber took $545 from Mrs. Pavenda.

Constable Joseph Stone, of Valhalla, reported the case to Inspector McCue, and the latter immediately went out to pick up the assailant, who was a New Yorker. With Riccardio at the time was another Italian, who has not yet been caught.

Magistrate Green turned the case over to Constable Stone, who came into court and received the prisoner. He was arrested at No. 1 Mott street on Sunday afternoon after a hard fight.
